An organization without any formal information security program that has decided to implement information security best practices should FIRST:

- A. define high-level business security requirements.
- B. invite an external consultant to create the security strategy.
- C. allocate budget based on best practices.
- D. benchmark similar organizations.

Answer: A

Explanation:

Explanation

All four options are valid steps in the process of implementing information security best practices; however, defining high-level business security requirements should precede the others because the implementation should be based on those security requirements.
