NEW QUESTION: 3

Which statement below MOST accurately describes configuration control?

- A. Tracking the status of current changes as they move through the configuration control process
- B. Assuring that only the proposed and approved system changes are implemented
- C. The decomposition process of a verification system into CIs
- D. Verifying that all configuration management policies are being followed

Answer: B

Explanation:

Configuration control is a means of assuring that system changes are approved before being implemented, only the proposed and approved changes are implemented, and the implementation is complete and accurate. This involves strict procedures for proposing, monitoring, and approving system changes and their implementation. Configuration control entails central direction of the change process by personnel who coordinate analytical tasks, approve system changes, review the implementation of changes, and supervise other tasks such as documentation. *Answer "The decomposition process of a verification system into CIs" is configuration identification. The decomposition process of a verification system into Configuration Items (CIs) is called configuration identification. A CI is a uniquely identifiable subset of the system that represents the smallest portion to be subject to independent configuration control procedures. Answer "Tracking the status of current changes as they move through the configuration control process" is configuration accounting. Configuration accounting documents the status of configuration control activities and, in general, provides the information needed to manage a configuration effectively. It allows managers to trace system changes and establish the history of any developmental problems and associated fixes. Configuration accounting also tracks the status of current changes as they move through the configuration control process. Configuration accounting establishes the granularity of recorded information and thus shapes the accuracy and usefulness of the audit function. *Answer "Verifying that all configuration management policies are being followed" is configuration audit. Configuration audit is the quality assurance component of configuration management. It involves periodic checks to determine the consistency and completeness of accounting information and to verify that all configuration management policies are being followed. A vendors configuration management program must be able to sustain a complete configuration audit by an NCSC review team.
