NEW QUESTION: 2

User A at Company A is trying to transfer files to Company B, using FTP. User A can connect to the FTP server at Company B correctly, but User A cannot get a directory listing or upload files. The session hangs.

What are two possible causes for this problem? (Choose two.)

A. Active FTP is being used, and the firewall at Company A is not allowing the returning data connection to be initiated from the FTP server at Company B.

B. The FTP server administrator at Company B has disallowed User A from accessing files on that server.

C. Passive FTP is being used, and the firewall at Company A is not allowing the returning data connection to be initiated from the FTP server at Company

D. Passive FTP is being used, and the firewall at Company B is not allowing connections through to port 20 on the FTP server.

E. At Company A, active FTP is being used with a non-application aware firewall applying NAT to the source address of User A only.

Answer: A,E

Explanation:

In Active FTP mode, the client connects from a random unprivileged port (>1023) to the command port (21) of the FTP server. Then the client starts to listen to port N+1 and sends the FTP command port N+1 to the FTP server. The server then connects back to the specified data ports of the client from its local data port, which is port 20.
